Health Economics Course

The CERGE-EI Foundation Distance Learning Program Health Economics course consists of 20 hours of online, live-streamed intensive lectures, with a focus on student interaction throughout. To successfully pass the course, students are required to attend and actively participate in the lectures and exercise sessions, complete two homework assignments, and pass weekly online quizzes and a comprehensive final exam.

This course covers production and demand for healthcare, how the determinants of demand and supply affect the costs of various types of healthcare services, and individual, family, and market investments in health. Throughout the course, students are exposed to the application of microeconomics and econometrics in analyzing various topics, such as the role of health insurance, healthcare in developing countries, and risky behavior.
